Man Clicks 'About Us' Hoping for Clarity, Leaves with Existential Dread

PHOENIX, AZ — After spending four minutes on The Mocking Post, local man Kevin C. clicked the “About” section hoping to better understand the website.

Instead, he left with questions about media bias, the singularity, and his own professional relevance. Sources confirm he is now reading Kafka in his backyard and muttering about GPT overlords.

The Mocking Post ™

Serious Satire for a World That's Lost the Plot since June 2025

TMP isn't just another parody site — it's a content rebellion. We roast, riff, and remix the news cycle into something sharper, weirder, and way too real to be fiction. Our writers? Sometimes human. Sometimes... not your business.

This is satire with bite. The kind that makes you laugh, then makes you think, then makes you double-check that it **was** satire. Or was it?

Why We're Different

- Interactive stories and opinion pieces with a dark, delicious twist
- User-submitted satire, roast threads, and comments welcome (you're not just an audience — you're ammo)
- No recycled memes. No AI-generated fluff. Just sharp, funny, dangerously plausible content

Who's Behind This?

The Mocking Post was launched under Foundric — a new media lab building bold brands at the edge of humor, tech, and culture. This isn't legacy satire. It's something weirder, faster, and slightly more unhinged.

Read Carefully.

We won't tell you how we generate our content — let's just say it involves ✨ bold writers, rogue ideas, and one or two @#$$%! that never sleep. If it feels a little too real, that's on purpose.
